

Font-size:

Print:

Obama Will Launch a Huge Propaganda Blitz -

Latest News / Top Stories

Obama Will Launch a Huge Propaganda Blitz — and May Attack Syria Even If He Loses the Vote in CongressUS State Terror Targets Syria: Air Power, Navy DeployedKeeping Deposits Safe, Local, and Working for Local Economies...with Public BanksNew Snowden Revelation details vast US Intelligence "Black Budget"US on Brink of Launching War against Syria based on LiesDid the White House Help Plan the Syrian Chemical Attack?Cooked Up Evidence. Trying to Fool the Public over Syria

All Articles

NEWS

MOST POPULAR

GEOGRAPHIC REGIONS

THEMES

E-BOOKS SERIES

IN-DEPTH REPORTS

THE GLOBAL RESEARCH NEWS HOUR

Watch Free Movies Nowfilmfanatic.com
Watch 1000s of Movies Free! Download Now For Movies & Showtimes3 Steps Tradingbbinary.com
New binary options trading is Here 3 simple steps & you're Good to GoAdChoices

Global Research Newsletter:

GO

Turkey finds Sarin Gas in Homes of suspected Syrian Islamists – May Report

By Global Research News

Global Research, September 01, 2013

RT

Like 33

3

Turkish security forces found a 2kg cylinder with sarin gas after searching the homes of Syrian militants from the Al-Qaeda linked Al-Nusra Front who were previously detained, Turkish media reports. The gas was reportedly going to be used in a bomb.

The sarin gas was found in the homes of suspected Syrian Islamists detained in the southern provinces of Adana and Mersia following a search by Turkish police on Wednesday, reports say. The gas was allegedly going to be used to carry out an attack in the southern Turkish city of Adana.

On Monday, Turkish special anti-terror forces arrested 12 suspected members of the Al-Nusra Front, the Al-Qaeda affiliated group which has been dubbed "the most aggressive and successful arm" of the Syrian rebels. The group was designated a terrorist organization by the United States in December.

Police also reportedly found a cache of weapons, documents and digital data which will be reviewed by police.

Following the searches, five of those detained were released following medical examinations at the Forensic Medicine Institution Adana. Seven suspects remain in custody. Turkish authorities are yet to comment on the arrests.

Russia reacted strongly to the incident, calling for a thorough investigation into the detention of Syrian militants in possession of sarin gas.

"We are extremely concerned with media reports. Russia believes that the use of any chemical weapons is absolutely inadmissible," Russian Foreign Ministry spokesman Alexander Lukashevich said on Thursday.

In a separate incident in Adana, police reportedly received intelligence that an explosive-laden vehicle had entered the town of Adana on Thursday, the Taraf daily reports.

Ankara has attempted to bolster the Syrian opposition without becoming embroiled in the Syrian civil war, a policy which Damascus claims lead to the deadliest act of terrorism on Turkish soil.

On May 11, 51 people were killed and 140 injured after two car bombs exploded in the Turkish town of Reyhanlı, located near the country's border with Syria. A dozen Turkish nationals have been charged in the twin bombings, and Ankara has accused Damascus of helping the suspects carry out the attack.

"This incident was carried out by an organization which is in close contact to pro-regime groups in Syria and I say this very clearly, with the Syrian Mukhabarat [intelligence agency]," Interior Minister Muammer Guler said.

Syria's Information Minister Omran Zoubi denied any link the attack, saying his country "did not commit and would never commit such an act because our values would not allow that". Zoubi further charged the Turkish government had facilitated the flow of arms, explosives, funds and fighters across the country's border into Syria, claiming that that Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan and his party bear direct responsibility [for the attack].

Reports of chemical weapons use by both Damascus and the Syrian opposition have surrounded the conflict in Syria for months.

In March, the Syrian government invited the United Nations to investigate possible chemical weapons use in the Khan al-Assal area of rural Aleppo. Military experts and officials said a chemical agent, most likely sarin, was used in the attack which killed 26 people, including Become a Member of Global Research – Receive Free Books!

“Artworks for Peace”: Support Global Research

Subscribe to Global Research’s RSS Feed

Donate to Global Research

Advanced Search

Index by Countries

Index by Author

Join us on Facebook

Global Research (Centre for Research on Globalization)

Like 23,548

Twitter: crg_crm

It is worth reiterating that without the vast amount of military, financial, and diplomatic largesse the west and... <http://t.co/RdPEzNoCQE> 10:13:05 PM August 29, 2013 from Facebook

Follow @crg_crm 314 followers

Global Research Publishers

Towards a World War III Scenario
by Michel Chossudovsky

Buy Now!

America's "War on Terrorism"
by Michel Chossudovsky

Buy Now!

Globalization of Poverty and the New World Order
by Michel Chossudovsky

Buy Now!

Seeds of Destruction: Hidden Agenda of Genetic Manipulation
by F. William Engdahl

Buy Now!

The Global Economic Crisis
by M. Chossudovsky and A. G. Marshall

Buy Now!

Visit our online store

Partner Websites

Project Censored

Stop NATO

government forces.

Damascus claimed Al-Qaeda linked fighters were behind the attack, further alleging Turkey had a hand in the incident.

“The rocket came from a placed controlled by the terrorist and which is located close to the Turkish territory. One can assume that the weapon came from Turkey,” Zoabi said in an interview with Interfax news agency.

US President Barack Obama has warned any confirmed use of chemical weapons by Damascus would cross a “red line” which would prompt further action. Both Washington and London claimed there was growing evidence that such chemical agents had been used.

Less clear perhaps is whether a similar red line would apply to Syrian opposition groups such as Al-Nusra by the US and NATO allies. Author and historian Gerald Horne, for one, told RT that there are greater political dynamics at work.

*“Well, one would think so, but of course we know that the United States along with its NATO partners Britain and France are quite close to the main backers of the rebels — I’m speaking of Saudi Arabia and Qatar. We know, for example, according to the Financial Times that Mr Sarkozy, the former president of France, is in very close financial relationship with the Qataris,”*says Horne.

That would be under the existing paragraph in the story: US President Barack Obama has warned any confirmed use of chemical weapons by Damascus would cross a “red line” which would prompt further action. Both Washington and London claimed there was growing evidence that such chemical agents had been used.

This case being similar to an earlier one, with the findings of UN chemical weapons expert Carla Del Ponte – who had found evidence of their use by the rebels – some think the fallout will be what it was then as well.

Journalist and RT contributor, Afshin Rattansi believes that the same fate will befall this story, as far as media coverage goes. All possible doubts will either be hushed or directed elsewhere, as they were toward Del Ponte’s findings.

“Carla Del Ponte – one of the greatest experts on this from the United Nations – did do an in-depth investigation only a few weeks ago, and of course, the mainstream media tried their best to ignore it and to character-assassinate Del Ponte... she did masses of work on this, and [found] It was the rebels and not the government.”

Rattansi goes on to say that “the news management of the Syria story has been incredibly sophisticated, and I don’t think it will be on the front pages of any newspapers in Britain or the United States – it will quietly disappear like Del Ponte’s case. The big story, of course, will be Russia and the delivery of the S-300.”

A day before the Reyhanli bombing, Erdogan released a statement claiming he had evidence the Syrian government had had used chemical weapons, crossing the red line set by President Obama. The accusation contradicted a statement made at the time by a leading UN investigator. Carla Del Ponte, who heads

The Independent International Commission of Inquiry on Syria, said there were “concrete suspicions but not yet incontrovertible proof of the use of sarin gas” in Syria.

“This was use on the part of the opposition, the rebels, not by the government authorities,” Del Ponte continued.

Exposure to large quantities of sarin gas, whose production and stockpiling was outlawed by the Chemical Weapons Convention of 1993, causes convulsions, paralysis, loss of respiratory functions and potentially death.

Like 33

Articles by: Global Research News

Frequent Contributor

Related content:

Terrorist Stronghold Destroyed: Syrian government troops chasing armed extremists in the suburbs of

Damascus

Terrorist strongholds were destroyed and dozens of mercenaries were killed and wounded during an operation in the Daraya, Diyabiya and Babilla neighborhoods, the Syrian television reports. Fierce clashes continue in the Yarmouk Palestinian refugee camp near Damascus following an attack...

What's going on at the Turkish-Syrian border? TURKEY SHELTERING FREE SYRIAN ARMY (FSA)

There is a video [1] that could be loosely translated as "Terrorist Turkish border opening fire on the Syrian side" that pretty accurately sums up what's going on at the ultra-volatile geopolitical hotspot of the moment. The voice over says,...

Iraq Then, Syria Now? The New York Times, Sarin and Skepticism

During the run-up to the Iraq War, the New York Times amplified erroneous official claims about weapons of mass destruction (FAIR Action Alert, 9/8/06). Looking at the paper's coverage of allegations of chemical weapons use by Syria, some of the...

Turkey's hijacking of Syrian plane raises specter of wider war

Turkey's forcing down of a Syrian passenger jet en route from Moscow to Damascus has heightened tensions between the two countries and provoked a sharp protest from the Russian government. The incident, which took place late Wednesday, underscores the danger...

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Center of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post original Global Research articles on community internet sites as long as the text & title are not modified. The source and the author's copyright must be displayed. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca
 Copyright © Global Research News, RTI, 2013

- English Français
- Español Italiano
- Deutsch Português
- srpski العربية

- Global Research News
- I-BOOKS SERIES
- Countries Index
- Authors Index
- Most Popular
- Links
- Contact
- Membership
- Online Store

Themes

- US NATO War Agenda
- Global Economy
- Crimes against Humanity
- Militarization and WMD
- Law and Justice
- Police State & Civil Rights
- Culture, Society & History
- 9/11 & 'War on Terrorism'
- Media Disinformation
- Militarization and WMD
- Oil and Energy
- Police State & Civil Rights
- Politics and Religion
- Poverty & Social Inequality
- Science and Medicine
- United Nations
- US NATO War Agenda
- Women's Rights

Geographic Regions

- USA
- Canada
- Middle East & North Africa
- Latin America & Caribbean
- Europe
- sub-Saharan Africa
- Russia and FSU
- Asia
- Oceania

Privacy Policy Copyright © 2005-2013 GlobalResearch.ca